Columbus Day Observed by History Class of Central High

SCENARIO BY A SENIOR

Trials and Troubles of Discoverer of America Produced in Assembly

Columbus Day was observed in Tulsa Friday by the students of the history department of the Tulsa high school, who produced "The March of the Nations," a "living motion picture." The production was given at the regular assembly hour Friday morning to the students in the high school. It was such a success that the picture will be shown again at 8 o'clock Monday night, October 25, in the auditorium of the high school. A small admission fee will be charged.

Tom Langworthy played the part of the Reader of the Scroll, the only character who spoke a word. From his scroll he read the history of the nation up to Columbus' time. At the conclusion of the prologue, the picture was shown. In this the council of the king and queen were shown discussing whether the world was round or flat. In the second scene Columbus appears and he tries to convince the councilors that the world is round. Students of Salamanca come on and it is finally decided to send Columbus a chance to present his case before the king and queen.

The third scene was in the court of Queen Isabella and King Ferdinand, where Columbus was presented by his secretary, Mr. Margaret Campbell and Caliste Miller. Their costumes were elaborate, in keeping with the Spanish court life.

From the court scene, at which time arrangements were made for Columbus to make the voyage, the play goes on showing the preparations, and the landing in America. The meeting of the white and red races was effective. The last act showed Columbus making a last appeal to Ferdinand, and the refusal that resulted in the failure and death of Columbus.

The Epilogue, which portrayed the building of America, showed how Progress and Hope triumphed. Indian and Puritan maidens met and played together, and were later joined by Quaker, Dutch and Colonial maidens, who all joined hands and danced the Virginia Reel.

The scenario from which all the picture were taken, was written by Eugene Kaufmann, a senior student in history. The production was presented by the history department, and although no words were spoken outside of the reading of the scroll, every detail was brought out to make the audience live through the struggles of Columbus in "searching for light."

More Gits Are Warned. Brownwood, Tex., Oct. 23.—Two girls at May, near here, were posted last night with warnings to cease operations. The girls were running today and the owners said the warnings would be ignored.

Auto Thieves Become Bolder Here; Machine a Day Being Stolen

Automobile thieves are becoming bolder in their actions in Tulsa, according to the police. During the past week an average of a car a day has been stolen.

Dee Pitts, 427 South Olympia, is the latest sufferer. His four-passenger Chandler was stolen from in front of the Eika club about noon yesterday. Mr. Pitts reported to the police that he was away from the car only a few minutes. No trace of the auto has been found.

An Oakland five passenger touring car belonging to George McCurdy, of 1510 South Quincy, was stolen from the south side of the Palace building late Thursday afternoon. McCurdy reported to the police yesterday. McCurdy parked his car about 5 o'clock and upon returning an hour later it was gone. The thieves made good their getaway.

22 lines engaged in building material from the manufacturer down to the retailers and then banding together of the different associations under the head of the building material employer's association.

"We purpose to show that not only has labor been dragged into the building trades council in many instances, but that employers have been dragged and forced to accept certain of these associations by the relation that exists between the building trades council and the building trades employers' association," he said.

As to the testimony regarding a $25,000 bribe, he said, it would be found that "the little change that was referred to yesterday is a very trifling item in this organized raid upon the building industry and that it is so widespread that until it had been checked and punished, building operations in the city of New York are simply impossible."

Adjourn Until November 4. After hearing several witnesses, the legislative committee adjourned this afternoon until November 4 to give counsel for the committee time to study and arrange the vast amount of evidence obtained from witnesses and in raids conducted yesterday by representatives of the state attorney general.

Testimony brought out yesterday was to the effect that Ephraim H. Levy, a builder engaged in a $2,000,000 construction, paid $25,000 to George Backer, another builder, in immediate charge of the operations for transmission. It was understood to Robert P. Brindell, president of the building trades council of New York, as a go between for the "committee" who promised to stop a strike.

Brindell issued a statement to the press this afternoon that he would "welcome an investigation of any act of my life before the proper authorities where justice and fairness would be accorded me."

"I challenge any man, real estate operator, builder, employer or employee to prove before a court of justice," he said, "that I ever took one dollar in my life from an employer of labor, directly or indirectly."

BUSINESS HEAD WANTS CHANGE

L. C. Sands of Pittsburgh, Although a Democrat, Is for Harding

"The progress of the United States will be more rapid if we have a change in our government," says Louis C. Sands of Pittsburgh, Pa., vice president and general manager of the Oil Well Supply company, who is in the city this week. Mr. Sands is a Democrat, but he says he is going to vote for Harding because he will not allow party affiliation to swerve him one iota from what he considers right.

When asked if the result of the election would affect the industries of the country, Mr. Sands said that he does not believe it will. He says industries are strong enough and big enough to go on just as they have through all the past few years, no matter which party wins.

Mr. Sands does believe, however, that if Harding is elected the people will exert greater efforts to make a betterment to right the wrongs. If there is a change in government there will be greater confidence on the part of the people, and it takes confidence to win, according to Mr. Sands.

For America First. "I am betting on the American people," Mr. Sands says. "I am strong for the country first and last, regardless of politics."

Mr. Sands was asked if the election of Harding would cause prices to drop. He said that he was sure there would be a great change, and the present high prices would not continue, but that he does hope the change will be slow. "A rapid change will mean disaster to many people, from the greatest industry to the laboring man," said Sands.

"The league of nations means the giving up of the independence of America," he says.

THIEVES GET DIAMOND

Lavelle, Valued at $150. Taken from House—Front Door Holds, But Entrance Gained Through Rear.

After an unsuccessful attempt to "jimmy" the front door, sneak thieves entered a rear window of Mrs. J. C. Steinberg's, 405 South Cheyenne, sometime Thursday afternoon and escaped with a diamond lavelle valued at $150, according to Mrs. Steinberg's report to the police yesterday morning.

The weather strip of the front door casing had been pried off and an attempt made to tear the door from its hinges. Police detectives who investigated the robbery said, but the door stuck. The glass in a rear window was finally broken. The house was completely ransacked. The robbery was perpetrated while the family was at town.

500 VOTES ADDED DURING LAST DAY

But County Registrar Is Unable to Estimate Voting Strength

Registration closed in all the city precincts at 7 o'clock Friday night after the various registrars had put in the most strenuous day in the history of city registration. At least 500 new names were added to the voting list the closing day. The registration of the last period has been about equally divided, according to the registrars.

The closing day was marked by the large number of women who became eligible voters. Campaign committees composed of women representing both parties made a house to house canvass in the interest of women going to the polls and this was largely responsible for the large registration.

Vernon F. Beaman, county registrar, stated Friday night that no definite figures will be available until the books have been turned into him by the precinct registrars. He is unable to estimate the total vote in the city as will be indicated by the registration.

Personal money has been made in Tulsa for circulation among the natives.

CAPPER PREDICTS HARDING VICTORY

When the contrary, Great Britain possesses six votes in the United States' vote.

"I am any judge, what the people want is better government and less government," the speaker asserted. "The present administration is the most extravagant, the most inefficient, yes, the most incompetent administration that we have had in half a century."

"We frequently hear of the amount of money made during the past four years. Yes, 22,000 new millionaires were made during that time and most of them became millionaires through profiteering. A bill was passed at the request of the attorney general to stop profiteering. Yet not one of them has ever been put behind prison walls, and none of them ever will be as long as the present administration has charge of affairs."

The more mention of the words "profiteering" brought forth a storm of laughter from the crowd. Capper's reference in that department of the present administration was brief. "And when the change of administration gets here," he explained, "we're going to get a postmaster general who can get a letter from Tokyo to Tulsa in less than six days. I had this experience, so I know what I'm talking about."
